Anseo Enterprise is an automated time and attendance management system, designed by Ivertec, a leading Irish developer of information management software and services for Education. Anseo Enterprise is wholly designed to cater for the needs of Irish schools and colleges. Through the effective and innovative use of technology, it is designed to save time and reduce the effort in collecting, maintaining and analysing student attendance records. With the introduction of the Education and Welfare Act in 2000, Anseo Enterprise has progressively developed to accommodate the additional tasks this piece of legislation requires.

Through the cooperation and assistance of many schools throughout the country, Anseo Enterprise is now the market leader in school attendance systems in Ireland.

Anseo Enterprise Edition can be supplied with two methods for recording student attendance:

rFID - Student Identification Cards

Students register their attendance using an student identification card.

FaceID - Facial Recognition

Students register their attendance by standing in front of the FaceID device while a 3D photo is taken and verified against the student's face template. No cards or badges required.
